Supreme Judicial Court.

FEBRUARY TERM, 1886.

Hox. Enoch Foster, Justice Presiding.

In the case of Patrick Harrington vs. Patrick Connolly verdict last week, the jury found a verdict for plaintiff for $2.25 damages.

The Democrat says—Just before the adjournment of the forenoon session Wednesday week, the officers of the court walked into the courtroom accompanied by a small man, dressed in a neat suit of mixed cloth. Few persons in the room at the time knew who this man was or what he had come there for.

He realized that the man in question was a defendant in the case of Harrington vs. Connolly, and he was with considerable effort that he kept back the tears, but when the usual question was put to him, "Are you guilty or not guilty?" he replied in a clear, distinct voice, "I am not guilty."

He said with considerable emphasis, "I am not guilty, and I will stand by my word."

He then turned to the jury and said, "I am not guilty, and I will stand by my word."

He then turned to the jury and said, "I am not guilty, and I will stand by my word."

Byron C. Waite of Canton proved to be the fifth man hanged.

Marion Holman of Biddeford had formed an opinion and was executed.

A. F. Moody of Stonham was challenged.

W. F. Handley of Woodstock does not believe in hanging but has no conscientious scruples when the law prescribes a penalty. He was sworn as the sixth juror.

Newton C. Moore of Albany and George E. Hayes of Oxford were challenged.

A. F. Moody of Biddeford passed the ordeal of questioning satisfactorily and was sworn as the seventh juror.

W. F. Handley of Denmark was sworn as the eighth juror.

Ass. D. Kimball of Hiram, a miller, had conscientious scruples on hanging in a verdict when hanging might be the result.

M. S. Simons of Denmark was challenged while Franklin Porter of Paris passed muster and was sworn as the ninth juror.

Ernest Hayes of Mexico proved to be the tenth juror. He was selected on a full stomach as it was the court day just opened in the afternoon session.

Freston S. Love of Biddeford had no conscientious scruples but did not convict a man on circumstantial evidence and was executed.

John E. Hays of Norway was the eleventh man sworn as juror.

Alden Keneo of Sumner thought hanging was our worst mode of executing a criminal.

N. B. Frost of Norway hadn't heard anything about the case but was challenged.

R. E. Martin of Rumford, butcher, had conscientious scruples and was excused.

I saw him he was just pulling him along.

Foss was offering no resistance. My mind was made up. It was when they were about half way to the gallows that I called to my husband. His sister, Mrs. Foss, was running along with my husband when I first saw them in the road from Foss. While I was then the distance between them was about the same.

My husband was pulling me along. I didn't notice it enough to be particular. Think it was two or three feet behind me. I saw him go on. My husband was coming toward the house, and Mr. Foss was following. I think my husband was going toward the gallows. When Mrs. Foss spoke to him he stopped.

The counsel here went into the relations of the parties prior to the affray, and the Attorney General objected. "It is not a matter of investigation," he said.

"It is not the purpose to settle family quarrels," he said. "The relation of the parties is not material except at the time of the transaction," said the Judge.

The examination was finally admitted with a hint from the court that it must not be a matter of investigation, which it did not and was ruled out.

Re-examined. My husband was Mrs. Foss.

Charles F. White. Reside in Eaton, N. H., about 2 miles from Foss on the main road toward Biddeford.

He was called to the stand by the court. I met him near Stillman Park, where he was then residing. He had been seven years within a year, three years of which he had lived and worked in the house. "I want the key to the house," he said. "I want the key to the house," he said. "I want the key to the house," he said.

He said, "I want the key to the house," he said. "I want the key to the house," he said. "I want the key to the house," he said.
